

Dear Community Leader,

I am Dr. Antonia Novello, Executive Director of Public Health Policy at Florida Hospital and former U.S. Surgeon General. I would like to cordially invite you to our Distinguished Lecture Series on March 17, 2010 at 6:30 pm. The title of this Lecture is "Heart Disease in Women: Exploding Myths, Improving Outcomes." It will feature national cardiac researcher Claire Duvernoy, MD.

Dr. Duvernoy is the Director of the Women's Heart Program at the University of Michigan and Chief of the Cardiology Section at the VA Ann Arbor Healthcare System. She has authored numerous books and peer-reviewed articles on Coronary Heart Disease, Congestive Heart Failure and gender differences in Heart Disease.

She will help us identify and understand the key differences in the symptoms and treatment of heart disease in women. I believe strongly that we, as women, should rely on Dr. Duvernoy's expertise to advance and protect our heart health. In the field of Cardiology, Men and Women are not equal. I hope I see you there.

The Lecture will be held at our main Florida Hospital campus in Orlando. 601 East Rollins Street, Orlando, FL 32803. Admission and Parking are FREE but you need to RSVP with the Florida Hospital Friends & Family Hotline at (407) 303-1700.

Sincerely,
